Credit Recovery Courses

Online Credit Recovery

You may want to consider taking a credit recovery course if you need to make up credits for a course that you previously failed or did not complete. Here are a few reasons why taking a credit recovery course can be beneficial:

1. Meet Graduation Requirements: If you failed a required course or did not complete it, a credit recovery course can help you earn the credits needed to meet graduation requirements.
2. Save Time: Instead of retaking the entire course, a credit recovery course can allow you to focus only on the areas that you need to improve. This can save you time and help you get back on track towards graduation.
3. Improve Your GPA: If you previously received a low grade in a course, a credit recovery course can give you the opportunity to improve your GPA by retaking the course and earning a higher grade.

At ADVANTAGES

Our comprehensive courses support programs that are targeted at keeping students who have not earned required course credits on track for graduation. Students taking courses for credit recovery use the same rigorous, standards-based courses as students engaged in courses for original credit, ensuring that all students are mastering the skills and concepts necessary for their future success. These courses include pretests that generate individualized learning plans designed to help students recover credits more efficiently.

72% of students in credit recovery have attendance issues, so motivation is key. ADVANTAGES' students are participants in their learning, not just passively receiving of instruction. As a result, students are not only engaged, they develop deeper understanding of the material.

Our curriculum is designed with the struggling student in mind. Scaffolding and supports are built into the curriculum to give students help the moment they need it.

Overall, a credit recovery course can be a valuable tool for students who need to make up credits or improve their grades in a specific course. It is important to speak with your success manager to determine if a credit recovery course is right for you and to learn more about the options available.
